

The Greater Houston Partnership Energy Committee is a business-led committee within the Economic Development Division, supporting the Regional Economic Development Advisory Committee and the International Trade Advisory Committee. The Energy Committee's mission is to spur and support the regional growth and development of Greater Houston's energy industry, championing Houston's position as the global energy capital by advancing innovation, sustainability, and long-term competitiveness across the energy ecosystem. The committee delivers impact by focusing on three priorities: (1) building global and regional business networks to position Houston as the premier hub for energy investment, (2) expanding economic opportunities across the energy value chain, and (3) fostering cross-sector collaboration to accelerate progress and resilience.
